a. Supporting facts:

Tell your story briefly without citing cases or law. If you are challenging the legality of your conviction, describe the facts upon which your conviction is based. If necessary, attach additional pages. CAUTION: You must state facts, not conclusions. For example, if you are claiming incompetence of counsel you must state facts specifically setting forth what your attorney did or failed to do and how that affected your trial. Failure to allege sufficient facts will result in the denial of your petition. (See In re Swain (1949) 34 Cal.2d 300, 304.) A rule of thumb to follow is: who did exactly what to violate your rights at what time (when) or place (where). PREAMBLE

This habeas petition alleges constitutional violations that occurred at petitioner's fourth parole hearing held by the Board Parole Hearings (Board) on December 15, 2005. The Board, for the fourth time, denied petitioner parole who is serving a sentence of 7 to life for aggravated mayham (a non-homicide offense), a parolable offense, that occurred in April of 1991. Petitioner's minimum eligible parole date for release was set for May 29, 1998. (Exhibit D page 1:4-15, 1:19-20).

To fully inform this court on the chronological history of petitioner's prior parole hearings, the Board's reasons for previous parole denials and Board's recommendations to be found suitable for parole which has led up to petitioner's fourth parole hearing and his fourth parole denial despite petitioner's attempts, who enter this prison system completely unable to speak and understand the English language, to accomplish demands made by the Board to be found suitable, petitioner submits the following factual events:

I. Petitioner's First Parole Hearing
Held on May 1, 1997

Petitioner took before the Board self help accomplishments to include, a teacher's helper in Adult Basic Education, improving education skills, and assisting other inmates, studying towards his GED. (Exhibit A page 12:3-8), Alcoholic and Narcotics Anonymous participation, (Exhibit A page 14:7-27, 15:1-27), and a disciplinary free program (Exhibit A page 11:21-22). The

1 prison psychologist stated that if petitioner "would be able to 2 stay off drugs and alcohol, he may very well be a person that 3 is not violent prone." (Exhibit A page 16:23-24). Despite the 4 aforementioned, the Board denied petitioner parole for two years 5 stating:

6 7 "The offense was carried out in a cruel and 8 callous manner with a disregard for the 9 suffering of others in a dispassionate, 10 calculated manner. These conclusions are drawn 11 from the statement of facts wherein the prisoner 12 and his crime partners attacked the victim 13 and the prisoner stabbed the victim in the 14 eye which resulted in permanent damage. The 15 prisoner had an escalating pattern of criminal 16 conduct which included two offenses for 17 transporting or selling illegal drugs....
 18 The prisoner has failed to develop a marketable 19 skill that could be put to use upon release 20 and he is not sufficiently participated in 21 in beneficial self help and therapy programs.
 22 The prisoner should be commended for having 23 participated in an educational upgrading, ABE 24 II and III, and he's also participated in AA 25 and NA. However, these positive aspects of 26 his behavior do not outweigh the factors of 27 unsuitability.

18 ¶ The panel recommends that the prisoner becomes 19 or remain disciplinary free, continue to up-20 grade educationally and vocationally, 21 participate in available self help and therapy 22 programming." (Exhibit A page 28:9-26, 29:1-23 8, 30:1-4).

23 II. Petitioner's Second parole
 24 Hearing Held on May 10, 2001

25 For the second parole hearing, petitioner took before the 26 Board another disciplinary free program (Exhibit B page 22:4), 27 his G.E.D. diploma, work as a chapel porter and continuous A.A.
 28 and N.A. program since 1995. (Exhibit B page 22:10-27, 23:1-1 27, 24:1-8, 33:17-20). The prison psychologist stated that, if 2 released, petitioners violence potential "is considered to be no more than the 3 average citizen in the community." (Exhibit B page 25:12-13).

4 Despite the aforementioned, the Board denied petitioner for 5 two years stating:

6 "The commitment offense was carried out in 7 an especially cruel manner. It was carried 8 out in a manner which demonstrated an 9 exceptional callous disregard for human 10 suffering. And the motive for the crime was 11 inexplicable or very trivial in relation to 12 the offense. These conclusions are drawn from 13 the statement of facts wherein the inmate had 14 gotten in an argument with the victim, James 15 Brooks, James Brooks, claims that he had known 16 the inmate prior to this. And the inmate pulled 17 the knife. Brook retreated, however, he slipped 18 or tripped. He went down. Mr. Escalante's 19 friends kicked him, hit him, and the inmate 20 stabbed him in the right eye. (Exhibit B page 21 43:12-25).

22 ¶ The inmate does have a previous record.
23 He did fail to profit from society's attempts 24 to correct his criminality. Those attempts 25 included adult probation. He has unstable 26 social history and prior criminality which 27 includes drug use and an illegal entry into 28 the United States. He has several arrests, however, three convictions. Two of those are for control substance for which he is serving additional commitment on. One of them is a misdemeanor plus a firearm, which he said must be another case of mistaken identity, as it was not him. However, he does admit to the two controlled substance charges. The prisoner institutionally has been programming. (Exhibit
B page 44:6-19).

23 ¶ He should be commended for his participation 24 in AA and NA and the 12 steps, also for never 25 having a 115. He's definitely to be commended 26 for that. He did completed his GED last year 27 10/ 2000. According to the inmate he is on 28 a waiting list for a vocation. And all those are very, very, good signs towards positive programming, which I will say that he is doing.
(Exhibit B page 45: 11-18)

¶ The Panel recommends that the prisoner remain

1 disciplinary-free, that if available to upgrade
2 vocationally and also self help and therapy
3 programs." (Exhibit B page 46:15-19).

4 III. Petitioner Third Parole Hearing
5 Held on May 27, 2003

6 For the third parole hearing petitioner took before the Board another 7 disciplinary free program, placement on the waiting list for vocation, a GED, 8 numerous self help groups, to include STI, HIV/AIDS, and Hepatitis program, 9 a 13-week Impact program and religious service attendance, and NA-AA 10 attendance since 1995. (Exhibit C page 21:12-14, 22:7-11, 22:16-27, 23:1-11 11, 23:24-25, 24:4-6, 26:1-2). The prison psychologist stated that if 12 release, petitioner's "violence potential is considered to be no more than 13 the average citizen in the community." (Exhibit C page 28:26-27, 29:1-2).
14 Despite the aforementioned, the Board denied petitioner parole for two years 15 stating:

16 "The offense was carried out in an especially cruel, vicious 17 manner. The offense was carried out in manner which 18 demonstrates an exceptionally cold hearted disregard for 19 human suffering wherein, the prisoner had gotten into an 20 argument with the victim, James Brooks. And the prisoner 21 pulled a knife. The -- Mr. Brooks retreated; however, he 22 slipped and tripped. He went down and Mr. Escalante's 23 friends kicked him -- and the prisoner stabbed him in the 24 right eye. (Exhibit C page 44:15-26).

25 ¶ He's failed to upgrade vocationally as previously 26 recommended by the Board, as well as he's not sufficiently 27 participated in beneficial self help and therapy programming 28 at this time. The psychosocial report was adequate. Parole plans was adequate.... (Exhibit C page 46:3-10).

¶ [T]he prisoner should be commended for taking self help groups in terms of Sexually Transmitted Diseases. He completed the Impact program, as well as he's participated in NA. He's on the waiting list currently for computers.
He had positive work reports as a porter, as well as he in the past, 2000 I believe was the accurate date, completed his GED. (Exhibit C page 47:6-13).

¶ [R]ecommendations to you, Mr. Escalante, are to remain disciplinary free, if it's available to you, to upgrade vocationally and educationally, as well as if it's available to you participate in beneficial self help programming to better understand the causative factors on why you're before us here today...." (Exhibit C page 49:1-7).

IV. Petitioner's fourth Parole Hearing At Issue Held On December 15, 2005

For the fourth parole hearing, petitioner took before the Board another disciplinary free program, parole plans, a home to live in and two job offers, good work reports, AA and NA self help therapy and Impact program self help participation. (Exhibit D page 23:1-27, 24:1-7, 25:1-7, 30:1-19, 35:15-22, 36:1-27, 45:1-2). Despite the aforementioned, the Board denied petitioner parole for two years stating:

"Sir one of the main factors that we took into consideration is the gravity of the offense in that after reviewing the facts of the crime, it is the opinion of this Panel that the offense was carried out in an especially cruel and callous manner in that the victim was hit and kicked and knocked to the ground. Once he was on the ground, the record reflects that you grabbed him by the hair and stabbed him in the eye resulting in the loss, permanent loss, of sight in that particular eye as well as a frontal lobotomy. The offense was carried out in a dispassionate and calculated manner.... (Exhibit D page 42:12-17).

¶ The offense was carried out in a manner which demonstrates an exceptionally callous disregard for human suffering.... (Exhibit D page 42:23-25).

¶ [Y]ou were arrested on a number of occasions prior to the commitment offense.... One of those offenses resulted in a condition for which you were sentence, a felony conviction for which you were sentenced to 180 day in jail.... (Exhibit D page 44:3-13).

¶ The record reflects that you have an unstable social history and prior criminality as previously outlined which includes the arrest and or convictions that were previously noted to include the use of marijuana and cocaine. (Exhibit D page 44:20-24).

¶ Again, the most recent psychological report is not totally supportive of release, and furthermore, it is somewhat contradictory in that it indicates that if you were to be release to the community, your risk would be minimal. However, the doctor firmly states that any, that you deny

1 any responsibility and that you need to develop some insight 2 or at least a reasonable explanation before being cosidered
3 for parole. (Exhibit D page 49:2-11)

4 ¶ [y]ou need to participate in more self help and therapy 5 in order to help you come to terms with the underlying cause 6 of the commitment offense in that even though you are not 7 required to discuss or admit to the commitment offense, 8 you still need to be able to demonstrate some sort of insight 9 when you come before this panel.... (exhibit D page 52:1-10 9)

11 ¶ Nevertheless, sir, we would like to take this opportunity 12 to commend you for not having received any 115's throughout 13 the entire time that you have been incarcerated.
14 That's very commendable. We understand that it can be 15 difficult for you to maneuver through these shark infested 16 waters within the institution not incurring any 115's, 17 so we certainly commend you for having the ability and the 18 skill not incur any disciplinary while within the 19 institution. Sir, we'd also like to commend you for your 20 continued participation in AA, NA.... (Exhibit D page 52:13-26).

21 ¶ We recommend, if you're able to do so, you complete at 22 least one trade.... Also,... immerse yourself in any and 23 all self help that maybe available within the institution.
24 If there is nothing available, then we would recommend that 25 you go to library.... (Exhibit D page 53:4-6, 54:5-9).

CLAIM I

THE BOARD'S DENIAL OF A PAROLE DATE FOR THE FOURTH TIME BASED ON PETITIONER'S CONDUCT PRIOR TO IMPRISONMENT TO JUSTIFY DENIAL OF PAROLE VIOLATES PETITIONER'S LIBERTY INTEREST IN PAROLE AND EXPECTATION IN RECEIVING A PAROLE DATE VIOLATING DUE PROCESS OF LAW UNDER THE 14th AMENDMENT TO THE U.S. CONSTITUTION

At petitioner's fourth hearing the Board relied on petitioner's conduct prior to imprisonment, to include the commitment offense, to deny parole. (Exhibit D pages 42-48). Petitioner's conduct prior to imprisonment, to include the commitment offense, was also used at petitioner's three prior parole hearings to deny parole. (See Exhibit A page 28-29, B page 43-44, and C page 44-45). The denial of parole at petitioner's fourth parole hearing was done regardless of petitioner's exemplary behavior for the past 15 years of incarceration and evidence of rehabilitation as stated in the above preceding pages at petitioner's first, second, third, and fourth parole hearings. Petitioner submits that this fourth denial of parole based on his conduct prior to imprisonment violated due process of law.

Post Dannenberg cases (In re Dannenberg 34 Cal.4th 1061 (2005)) indicate this to be true. As the recent Court of Appeals wrote in In re Scott 133 Cal.App.4th 573, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d 905 (2005) regarding the continuous use of the conduct prior imprisonment wrote:

"The Governor's assumption that a prisoner may be deemed unsuitable for release may be deemed unsuitable for release on the basis of the commitment offense 'alone' is correct, (Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 682) but the proposition must be properly understood. The commitment offense is one of only two factors indicative of unsuitability,

1 a prisoner can not change (the other being his 'previous 2 record of violence'). Reliance on such an immutable factor 3 'without regard to or consideration of subsequent 4 circumstances' may be unfair. (In re Smith (2003) 114 5 Cal.App.4th 343,372), and runs contrary to the 6 rehabilitative goals espoused by the prison system and 7 could result in due process violation.' (Biggs v Terhune, 8 supra, 334, F.3d at p. 917). The commitment offense can 9 negate suitability only if the circumstances of the crime 10 reliably established by evidence in record rationally 11 indicate that the offender will present an unreasonable 12 public risk if released from prison. Yet, the predictive 13 value of the commitment offense may be very questionable 14 after a long period of time (Iron v Warden of California 15 State Prison - Solano (E.D. Cal. 2005) 358 F.Supp.2d 16 936, 947,fn.2).") (id. at p. 919-920)

17 "The Governor states in his decision that the gravity 18 of Scott's offense is alone a sufficient basis 'on which 19 to conclude that his release from prison at this time 20 would pose an unreasonable public risk.' That statement 21 could be repeated annually until Scott dies or is rendered 22 helpless by the infirmities of sickness or age." 23 (id. at p. 919-920 fn. 9 (emphasis in original)).

24 "It is worth noting, as our Supreme Court (People v 25 Martishaw 1981) 29 Cal.3d 733, 768, disapproved on other 26 grounds in People v Boyd (1985) 38 Cal.3d 762), that a 27 large number of legal and scientific authorities believe 28 that, even where the passage of time is not a factor and the assesment is made by an expert, predictions of future dangerousness are exceedingly unreliable." (id. at p. 920 fn. 9; (Petition for Review was denied in Scott on November 30, 2005, 2005 DJDAR 13803)).

29 In re Shaputis, 37 Cal.Rptr.3d 324, 135 Cal.App.4th 217 (2005), relying on Biggs v 30 Terhune., 334 F.3d 910, 916, (9th Cir. 2003), which is another post 31 Dannenburg case, wrote:

32 "[A]lthough reliance on conduct prior to imprisonment 33 to justify denial of parole can be initially justified 34 as fulfilling the requirements by state law where inmate 35 over time continues to demonstrate exemplary behavior 36 and evidence of rehabilitation, denying him a parole 37 date simply because of the nature of prior conduct would 38 raise serious questions involving his liberty interest in parole" (id at p. 335, citing also, Irons v Warden of California State Prison Solano (E.D. Cal. 2005) 358
 F.Supp.2d 936, 947 and fn.2).

1 Shaputis held that reliance on a parole applicant's "former lifestyle" prior 2 to imprisonment to deny parole, that such reliance on such an "historical relic" 3 is an "arbitrary and capricious [decision] within the differential standards 4 articulated by Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th 616." (Shaputis, supra, 37 Cal.
5 Rptr.3d at 335).

6 Even the court in In re Rosenkrantz, 29 Cal.4th 616 (2002), indicated that 7 the Board may not indefinitely rely on the nature of the offense to find 8 petitioner unsuitable for parole. A close examination of what the California 9 Supreme Court stated in Rosenkrantz illuminates this reasoning:

10 "The nature of the prisoners offense, alone can constitute a 11 sufficient basis for denying parole, (In re Minnis, supra, 7 Cal.
12 3d 639, 647; In re Ramirez, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th 549, 569, In 13 re Seabock (1983) 140 Cal.App.3d 29, 36-37.) Although the parole 14 authority is prohibited from adopting a blanket rule that 15 automatically excludes parole for individuals who have been 16 convicted of a particular type of offense, the authority properly 17 may weigh heavily the degree of violence used and the amount of 18 viciousness shown by a defendant. (Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th 19 at 682-683 [emphasis added]).

20 The emphasized portion applies equally well to prohibit blanket rules against 21 petitioner. (id. at 682 [recognizing inmate has a protected right to be 22 "considared on an individual basis"], emphasis in original).

23 Rosenkrantz not only recognizes a due process "liberty interest" in parole 24 (id. at 654, 661), it also recognizes that petitioner has a right to individual 25 consideration of parole aimed at determining whether petitioner presents an 26 unreasonable risk to the public if he is release on parole. The crime's facts 27 may be considered, but not if it makes a blanket rule that petitioner is 28 unsuitable for parole.

29 This reasoning is in line with Biggs v Terhune, 334 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2003), 30 in which the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that the Board's reliance 31 on the sole factors of the commitment offense to deny parole to a prisoner at his minimum eligible parole date, despite an intervening period of exemplary conduct. Nevertheless, the Biggs court stated:

"[T]he parole board's sole supportable reliance on the gravity of the offense and conduct prior to imprisonment to justify denial of parole can be initially justified as fulfilling the requirements set forth by the state law. Overtime, however, should Biggs continue to demonstrate exemplary behavior and evidence of rehabilitation, denying him a parole date simply because of the nature of Bigg's offense and prior conduct would raise serious questions involving his liberty interest in parole." (Biggs, supra, 334 F.3d at 916).

"A continue reliance in the future on an unchanging factor, the circumstances of the offense and conduct prior to imprisonment, runs contrary to the rehabilitative goals espoused by the prison system and could result in a due process violation." (id. at 917).

In line with Biggs regarding continuous use of precommitment factors to deny parole is contrary to due process, the Court in Irons v Warden of California State prison -Solano, 358 F.Supp.936 (E.D. Cal. 2005), wrote:

"[C]ontinuous reliance on unchanging circumstances transforms an offense for which California law provides eligibility for parole into a de facto life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. The court asks rhetorically — what is it about the circumstances of petitioner's crime or motive which are going to change? The answer is nothing. The circumstances of the crime will always be what they were, and petitioner's motive for the committing them will always be trivial. Petitioner has no hope for ever obtaining parole except perhaps that a panel in the future will arbitrarily hold that the circumstances were not that serious or the motive was more than trivial. Given that no one seriously contends lack of-seriousness or lack of triviality at the present time, the potential for parole in this case is remote to the point of non-existence. Petitioner's liberty interest should not be determined by such an arbitrary, remote possibility.

In the instant case, the BPT has apparently relied on these unchanging factors at least four prior times in finding petitioner unsuitable for parole. Petitioner has continued to demonstrate exemplary behavior and evidence of rehabilitation. 334 F.3d at 916. Under these circumstances, the continued reliance on these factors... violates due process." (id. at 947).

"¶ To a point it is true, the circumstances of the crime and motivation for it may indicate a petitioner's instability, cruelty, impulsiveness, violent tendencies and like. However, after fifteen or so years in the caldron of prison life, not exactly an ideal therapeutic environment to say the least, and after repeated demonstrations that despite the recognized hardships of prison,

1 this petitioner does not possess those attributes, the predictive 2 ability of the circumstances of the crime is near zero.^m 3 (id. at 947 fn.2).

4 In Masoner, infra, for example the court held that "the BPT's refusal to 5 grant a parole date and repeated failure to provide post commitment support 6 for the decisions [had] violated Masoner's liberty interest and due process 7 rights." (Masoner v State, 2004 WL 1080177 (C.D. Cal. 2004), ["[A]lthough a 8 commitment offense can provide some evidence to justify the initial denial of 9 parole date, subsequent denials in the face of exemplary behavior and 10 overwhelming evidence of rehabilitation raises serious questions involving an 11 inmate's liberty interest in parole." citing, Biggs, 334 F.3d at 919]).

12 Furthermore, yet another district court recently explained the rational 13 of why continuous use of the commitment offense and conduct prior to imprisonment 14 violates due process as follows:

15 "Whether the facts of the crime of conviction, or other unchanged 16 criteria, affect the parole eligibility decision can only be 17 predicated on the 'predictive value' of the unchanged 18 circumstances. Otherwise, if the unchanged circumstances per 19 se can be use to deny parole eligibility, sentencing is taken 20 out of the hand of judge and totally repositied in the hands of 21 the BPT. That is, parole eligibility could be indefinitely and 22 forever delayed based on the nature of the crime even though the sentence given set forth the possibility of parole — a sentence with the fact of the crime fresh in the mind of the judge. While it would not be a constitutional violation to forego parole altogether for certain crimes, what the state cannot constitutionally do is have a sham system where the judge promises the possibility of parole, but because of the nature of the crime, the BPT effectively deletes such from the system.

23 ¶ Nobody elected the BPT commissioners as sentencing judges.
 24 Rather, in some realistic way, the facts of the unchanged 25 circumstances must indicate a present danger to the community 26 if released, and this can only be assessed not in a vacuum, after four or five eligibility hearings, but counter poised against the back drop of prison events," (Bair v Folsom State Prison, 2005 WL 2219220, *12n.3 (E.D. Cal. 2005) report and recommendation adopted by 2005 WL 3081634 (E.D. Cal. 2005)).

28 In the circumstances of petitioner's case, the Board's reliance upon the 1 facts of petitioner's crime and his prior conduct violates due process.

2 (Exhibits A page 28-29, B page 43-44, C page 44-45, and D page 42-48). First, 3 continued reliance upon these unchanging factors makes a sham of California's 4 parole system and amounts to an arbitrary denial of petitioner's "liberty interest 5 in release on parole," "expectation that he will be granted parole," and his 6 "presumption that parole release will be granted." (See Mc Quillion v Ducan 7 306 F.3d 895, 902 (9th Cir. 2002); Biggs, supra, 334 F.3d at 914-915;
8 Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at 654, 661). Petitioner has been denied parole 9 on four different occasions. Continued reliance upon these unchanging factors 10 amounts to converting petitioner's parolable offense to a term of life without 11 the possibility of parole. (See, e.g., Irons, supra, 358 F.Supp.2d at 947 12 ["continuous reliance on the unchanging circumstances transforms an offense into 13 a de facto life imprisonment without the possibility of parole"]; Scott, supra, 14 34 Cal.Rptr.3d at 919-920, 133 Cal.App.4th at 594-595; Shaputis, supra, 37 15 Cal.Rptr.3d at 335). Second, the circumstances of the crime and petitioners 16 conduct prior to imprisonment do not amount to some evidence supporting the 17 conclusion that petitioner "currently" poses an unreasonable risk of danger 18 if released. (See, In re Smith 114 Cal.App.4th 343, 370, 372 [evidence must 19 show "that a prisoner currently would pose an unreasonable risk of danger if 20 release at this time."]; Shaputis, supra, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d at 334-335 [same]).
21 Upholding the recital of the commitment offense and conduct prior to imprisonment 22 as the Board has done to deny petitioner parole for the fourth time, "converts 23 a court reviewing the denial of parole into a potted plant." (In re Scott (2004) 24 119 Cal.App.4th 871, 898). In the parole context, the requirements of 25 due process can only be met if "some evidence supports the decision" and the 26 evidence underlying the decision is supported by "some indicia of rehabilitability."
27 (Biggs, supra, 334 F.3d at 914; Caswell v Calderon 363 F.3d 832, 839 28 (9th Cir. 2004); Scott, supra, 119 Cal.4th at 899; Superintendent v Hill 472

1 U.S. 445, 455-457 (1985)).

2 While it may have been reasonable to rely on petitioners offense and conduct prior 3 to imprisonment as an indicator of dangerousness for some period of time, 4 continued reliance on such unchanging circumstances -- after 15 years of 5 incarceration and four (4) parole suitability hearings -- violates due process 6 because these factors now lack predictive value with regards to petitioner's 7 present and future dangerousness. After 15 years of rehabilitation in which 8 petitioner's minimum eligible parole date for release passed on May 29, 1998, 9 (Exhibit D page 1:19-20), the ability to predict petitioner's future 10 dangerousness based simply on the circumstances of the crime and petitioners 11 conduct prior to imprisonment is nil. (See, Irons, supra, 358 F.Supp.2d at 12 947 n.2 ["four prior times in finding [Mr. Irons] unsuitable for parole " and 13 "after 15 years" imprisonment, ability to asses dangerousness "is near zero."]; 14 Scott, supra, 133 Cal.App.4th at 595, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d at 919-920 ["the predictive 15 value of the commitment offense may be very questionable after a long period 16 of time."]).

18 Petitioner's record is replete with evidence of petitioner's 19 rehabilitation, including positive psychological reports, correctional counselor 20 reports, extensive self improvement through education and A/A and N/A advances 21 as well as therapy and disciplinary free incarceration. (See Exhibit A page 22 11:21-22, 12:3-8, 14:7-27, 15:1-27, 16:23-24; B page 22:4, 22:10-27, 23:1-27, 23 24:1-8, 25:12-13, 33:17-20; C page 21:12-14, 22:7-11, 22:16-27, 23:1-11, 23:24-25, 25 36:1-27, 45:1-2). As the Board stated:

26 "We would like to take this opportunity to commend you for 27 not having received and 115's throughout the entire time 28 that you have been incarcerated. We certainly commend you for having the ability and the skill to not incur any disciplinaries while in the institutions. Sir, we'd also like to commend you for

1 the multiple laudatory chronos in your file as well as for 2 your continued participation in NA, AA."
(Exhibit D page 52:13-26).

3 While the Board may initially have been entitle to rely upon the commitment 4 offense and petitioner's conduct prior to imprisonment to find petitioner 5 unsuitable for parole, under these circumstances, petitioner submits that the 6 continued reliance on these pre-conviction factors do not now constitute "some 7 evidence" with "some indicia of reliability" of petitioner's current 8 dangerousness. (See, Hill, supra, 472 U.S. at 455; Bigss, supra, 334 F.3d at 9 917; Irons, supra, 358 F.Supp.2d at 947; Masoner, supra, 2004 WL 1080177 *1-

CLAIM II

THE COMMITMENT OFFENSE (A NON-HOMICIDE OFFENSE) DOES NOT RISE TO THE LEVEL OF "ESPECIALLY HEINOUS OR CRUEL MANNER" TO JUSTIFY A PAROLE DENIAL FOR THE FOURTH TIME; THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE SHOWING PETITIONER WAS A "CURRENT" THREAT IF RELEASED VIOLATING DUE PROCESS OF LAW

A). The Offense Does not Rise To "Especially Heinous, Atrocious Or Cruel Manner" To Deny Parole

Regarding the crime itself, as stated by the Board that petitioner "stabbed [Mr. Brooks] in the eye," was committed in an "especially cruel and callous manner" -- invoked California Code of Regulations, title 15 § 2402(c)(1) (Hereafter CCR), as justification to deny parole. (Exhibit D page 42-44, 46-47). To support their conclusions the Board held the offense was "carried out in a dispassionate and calculated manner," (See, 15 CCR § 2402(c)(1)(B)), which states:

"The offense was carried out in a dispassionate and calculated manner, such as an execution-style murder."
(See, Exhibit E).

Petitioner's offense, while callous, was not even a murder let alone an "execution style murder" as required by this subsection. Also the Board stated that the offense "was carried out in a manner which demonstrated an exceptionally callous disregard for human suffering," (See, 15 CCR § 2402(c)(1)(D)), which states:

"The offense was carried out in a manner which demonstrates an exceptional callous disregard for human suffering."
(See, Exhibit E).

The Board stated that it "does accept true the findings of the court. We are not here to retry your case." (Exhibit D page 9:8-11). Petitioner was convicted of "aggravated mayhem with use of a deadly weapon." (Exhibit D page 1:15). Even though petitioner was convicted of 1 stabbing the victim in the eye, the Board's continuous mention of Mr. Brooks 2 been hit and kicked -- there was never any evidence that petitioner hit 3 or kicked Mr. Brooks. (Exhibit D page 42:17-18, 43:21-22, 46:8). Petitioner 4 never hit or kicked the victim. (See Exhibit D page 13:16-17, C page 10:10, 5 14:3, 44:24-26, B page 39:17-19, 43:24-25, A page 8:1-2).

7 In determining whether petitioner committed the offense in an 8 "exceptionally callous" manner the law is clear that the Board is only 9 authorized to consider whether "[t]he prisoner committed the offense in 10 an especially heinous, atrocious or cruel manner." (15 CCR §2402(c)(1); 11 Exhibit E; In re Ramirez 94 Cal.App.4th 549, 570 (2001); In re Smith 109 12 Cal.App.4th 489, 504 (2003)). The Board's sole legally sufficient reference 13 to petitioner's alleged actions directly with the victim was that petitioner 14 stabbed the victim in the eye. (Exhibit D page 42:20-21, 43:23-24, 46:24).
15 While the offense may have been callous, the offense was not murder. While 16 to deny parole an offense must be "exceptionally callous," regarding murder, 17 the court in In re Scott 119 Cal.App.4th 871, 891 (2004), stated:

18 "[A]ll second degree murders by definition involve some 19 callousness - i.e., lack of emotion or sympathy, emotional 20 insensitivity, indifference to the feelings and suffering 21 of others. [Citation]. As noted, however, parole is the 22 rule, rather than the exception. And a conviction for 23 second degree murder does not automatically render one 24 unsuitable." (id., citing In re Smith 114 Cal.App.4th 25 343, 366 (2003)).

26 In the recent post Dannenberg case, In re scott, supra, 133 Cal.App.4th 27 573, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d 905 (petitioner for review denied), the court held that 28 the "unsuitability determination must be predicated on 'some evidence' that the particular circumstances of the [prisoner's crime]... indicated exceptional callousness and cruelty with trivial provocation." (id. at 922, citing Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.App. at 1098).

1 In Scott, Mr. Scott, armed with a handgun, went looking for his wife and 2 her boyfriend. When Mr. Scott found them, he approached the boyfriend and 3 purposely shot him three times hitting the victim in the head and thigh in 4 front of Scott's 13 year old son, his wife and "others," in which a stray 5 bullet could of easily struck an innocent bystander. (id. at 908).

6 The scott court found that the offense was not committed "in an 7 dispassionate and calculated manner... or in a manner demonstrating an 8 exceptional callous disregard for human suffering." (id. at 922 citing also 9 the connected case of In re Scott I 119 Cal.App.4th 871, 889-892 (2004)).

10 Using illustrations for an explanation, the court wrote:

11 12 "For example, premeditation was considered in 13 Rosenkrantz because, the prisoner had been convicted 14 only of a second degree murder, the evidence showed 15 'a full week of careful preparation, rehearsal and 16 execution .' and that the prisoner, who 'fire 10 shots 17 at close range from an assault weapon and fire at least 18 three or four shots into the victim's head as he lay 19 on the pavement,' carried out the crime with 'planning, 20 sophistication or professionalism.' (Rosenkrantz, at 21 p.678). Similarly, the evidence of premeditation relied 22 on in In re Lowe (2005) 130 Cal.App.4th 1405, which 23 also involved a second degree murder conviction, showed 24 that the prisoner purchase a gun shortly before the 25 murder, entered his victims bedroom in the middle of 26 the night while he was asleep, unsuspecting, and in 27 a special relationship of confidence and trust with 28 his killer, and shot him five times in the head and chest, execution style.' (id. at p. 1414). As the court stated, this evidence showed the murder 'was a cold-blooded execution' and that the prisoner's egregious acts [were] far more aggravated than the minimum necessary to sustain a second degree murder conviction.' (id. at p. 1415). In In re Deluna, supra, 126 Cal.App.4th 585, the petitioner, convicted of second degree murder, had a physical confrontation with the victim and shot him in the mouth and, as the victim bled and walked around the parking lot, followed him and continued firing until he died. The court of Appeal determined that 'the initial wounding and deliberate stalking of a defenseless victim can reasonably be characterized as especially cruel and callous. (id.
at p. 593)." (Scott, supra, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d at 922-923).

Accordingly, the following cases are examples of homicides not rising to the level of crimes committed in an especially heinous, atrocious, or cruel manner to deny parole: Smith, supra, 114 Cal.App.4th at 350-351, 366-367 [victim shot at close range "in the head" and twice more as she was falling to the floor," "shot Ms. Garner in the head three times" was not an especially grave crime to support a denial of parole]; Scott, supra, 119 Cal.App.4th at 891-892 and fn. 11, 893, 895 fn.14 [shooting the victim three times at close range in front of a child was not an exceptional callous crime to support a denial of parole at the second parole hearing]; In re Smith 109 Cal.App.4th 489, 492, 506 (2003) [victim shot twice, severely beaten, and drowned, court held crime was not committed in an especially heinous, atrocious, or cruel manner to deny parole]; In re Van houten 116 Cal.App.4th 339, 364-365 (2004) [member of the Charles Manson cult, was convicted of two murders where the husband and wife were subjected to hearing each other being killed by stabbing. All in an attempt to incite a race war; was a particular egregious crime to deny parole]; Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.App.4th at 1095 [evidence permitted to the conclusion that the defendant bludgeoned his wife multiple times with a pipe wrench to the point of incapacitating her and then drowned her or allowed her to drown in the the bathtub, was a particular egregious crime to deny parole].

As previously stated herein, petitioners alleged direct involvement in the offense was that he stabbed Mr. Brooks in the eye, which compared to the above cited cases can not be deemed "exceptionally callous disregard for human suffering." (Exhibit D page 43:4-7). Also, it is interesting to note that the victim, Mr. Brooks, after the alleged offense occurred, that Mr. Brooks himself was convicted of serious offenses warranting prison incarceration. (See, Exhibit C page 37:14-27, 38:1-14, 40:8-10). While the offense may be callous, labeling this non homicide offense can not reasonably be deemed "exceptionally callous" to deny parole for the fourth time, especially when petitioner has surpassed the "matrix" maximum time

1 to be served on such offense which calls for "11-12-13" years -- petitioner
2 has now served 15 years imprisonment. (See, 15 CCR § 2403(d) III C: Exhibit 3 F; Exhibit D page 40:8).

6 B). There Is No previous Record of Violence To Deny Parole
7

8 On this subject, the Board denied parole based on prior "criminal 9 Activity." (Exhibit D page 44:2-20, 48:1-18). While the Board mentions 10 "arrests," petitioner was only ever "convicted," other than the instant 11 commitment offense, of controlled substance violations and a misdemeanor.
12 (Exhibit D page 16:7-27, 17:1-9). The authority for denial of parole on 13 such subject is found in 15 CCR § 2402(c)(2) which states:

14 "previous Record of Violence. The prisoner on previous 15 occasions inflicted or attempted to inflict serious injury 16 on a victim, particularly if the prisoner demonstrated serious assaultive behavior at an early age."
(See, Exhibit E).

17 In the instant case, petitioner has no juvenile record. (Exhibit D 18 page 16:7-8). Petitioner was never "convicted" of "violence" in nature 19 offenses. (Exhibit D page 1:20-22); In re Smith 109 Cal.App.4th 489, 505 20 (2003) [Board must show a prisoner was "convicted" of a violent felony to 21 deny parole based on this criteria]]. Petitioner was never convicted of 22 a violent felony, other than the instant offense. Furthermore, reliance 23 on any arrest is improper because evidence of such arrest does not meet 24 the test of relevant, reliable information which the Board must base its 25 parole decision. (15 CCR § 2402, subd.(b) ["All relevant reliable 26 information ... shall be considered"]]). The Board may only consider a record 27 of violence which is "reliably documented." (id.) In a system in which 28 a defendant is considered innocent until proven guilty, an arrest can not legally be sufficient proof of guilt. (See, Penal code § 1096; People v Calloway 37 Cal.App.3d 905 (1974) [Arrests alone are not reliable evidence]; Estelle v Williams 425 U.S. 501, 503 [same]). As such, this was not "some evidence" containing "an indicia of reliability." (Scott, supra, 34 Cal.Rptr. 3d at 917; Biggs, supra, 334 F3d at 915).

C). There Was No Evidence Use By The Board
To Find Petitioner Had An Unstable Social History

To support a parole denial, the Board stated:

"The record reflects that you have an unstable social history and prior criminality as previously outlined which includes the arrest and, or convictions that were previously noted to include the use of marijuana and cocaine."

The authority to support a denial under the "unstable social history criteria" is found in 15 CCR § 2402 (c)(3) which states:

"Unstable social history. The prisoner has a history of unstable or tumultuous relationships with others."
(Exhibit E).

In In re Deluna 24 Cal.Rptr.3d 634 (2005), the Board denied parole based on prior substance abuse stating Deluna has, "An unstable social history."

The court wrote:

"On the general topic of defendant's social history, the Board found that the defendant has an unstable social history that included... A very severe alcohol problem, and you were carrying a loaded gun as a matter of routine."
(id. at 650).

The Board went on to conclude that Deluna "began consuming alcohol at the age of 17." (id.). And that "On the day of the murder defendant had consumed a 40 ounce bottle of beer, a six pack of tall beer and three pitchers of beer." (id.). While the consumption of alcohol and initiation of the fighting occurred while in the bar with friends, (id. at 646), the court concluded:

"Though there is some evidence that the defendant had an

1 alcohol problem, there is no evidence that it contributed 2 to 'a history of unstable or tumultuous relationship.'" (id. at 650).

3 Although a substance abuser may well have a history of unstable social 4 relationships, there is no evidence of that here. As the record shows, the 5 Board stated the previous use of marijuana and cocaine in and of itself showed 6 unsuitability. Furthermore, the Board's statements that petitioner had 7 an "unstable social history and prior criminality" alone is not enough to 8 show petitioner is a current threat, 15 years after the offense to show 9 petitioner is unsuitable for parole. (Exhibit D page 44:20-24, 40:8-9).

10 11 Under the rule of law what the Board must adhere to is that the evidence 12 they use to deny parole must be based on "some evidence" that contain "an 13 indicia of reliability" showing that petitioner is "currently" a threat.
14 (See, Smith, supra, 114 Cal.App.4th at 370-372; Shaputis, supra, 37 CalRptr3d 15 at 334-335; Scott, supra, 34 Cal.Rptr 3d at 917; Biggs, supra, 334 F.3d at 16 915). In this case, none of the above reasons is "some evidence" to show 17 petitioner is a "current" threat, 15 years after the offense, to justify 18 a denial of parole for the fourth time. Especially when petitioner has been 19 disciplinary free his entire incarceration with no substance abuse nor 20 antisocial behavior in the last 15 years. (Exhibit D page 40:8-9, 52:13-23; 21 Smith, supra, 109 Cal.App.4th at 505 ["A prisoner prior addition is not an 22 appropriate consideration in determining parole suitability "]; Smith, supra, 23 114 Cal.App.4th at 371 [prior substance abuse is not evidence to show a 24 prisoner is a "current" threat if released on parole])).
25

26 D). Petitioner's Parole Plans Were Adequate And Are Not 27 Factors For Unsuitability Findings; The Psychologist
28 Report Was Not A Basis For Unsuitability Findings
Nor Was The District Attorney's Comments

1 As negative evidence to support a parole denial for the fourth time the 2 Board stated that:

3 "Again, the most recent psychological report is not totally 4 supportive of release, and furthermore, it is somewhat 5 contradictory in that it indicates that if you were release 6 to the community, your risk would be minimal. However, 7 the doctor firmly states that you deny any responsibility 8 and that you need to develop some insight or at least a 9 reasonable explanation before being consider for parole.
10 In terms of your parole plans, sir, we do note for the record 11 that you do have realistic parole plans in that more likely 12 than not... you will be deported to Honduras, and we do 13 have letters in your file that support your parole plans 14 to live with your brother and, or cousin upon your release 15 to parole." (Exhibit D page 49:2-19, 45:10-22).

16 "However, the record reflects that you have not completed 17 any vocations throughout the entire time you have been in 18 prison. And although you have taken advantage of some self 19 help programs with in the institution, sir, you have not 20 specifically participated in beneficial self-help 21 specifically to address the issue of insight. (Exhibit D 22 page 45:1-10, 48:1-10, 48:19-26, 49:19-25, 52:1-10)

23 "Sir, the Hearing Panel notes that responses to Penal Code 24 Section 3042 indicate an opposition to the finding of parole 25 suitability by the District Attorney...." (Exhibit D page 26 51:1-4).

27 The Board stated that the psychologist reasoned that "if petitioner 28 would be released to the community, [his] risk would be minimal," not an "unreasonable risk of danger to society if released from prison." (15 CCR § 2402, subd.(a); Exhibit E). Thus, the psychologist supports release.
Both Penal Code § 5011(b) and 15 CCR § 2236 states that the "Board shall not require an admission of guilt to any crime" and "a prisoner refusal to discuss the offense shall not be held against the prisoner." But yet the Board stated "that even though you are not required to discuss or admit to the commitment offense, you still need to be able to demonstrate some sort of insight when you come before this Panel, and you have not done that," as well as denying parole based on petitioner's "need to develop some sort of insight or at least a reasonable explanation before being considered

1 for parole." (Exhibit D page 52:5-9, 49:7-11, 45:20-22). Petitioner
2 exercised his right not to discuss the commitment offense. (Exhibit D page 3 10:16-19). The Boards demand that petitioner must "develop some insight or 4 at least a reasonable explanation before being consider for parole" is in 5 direct violation of Penal Code 5011(b) and 15 CCR § 2236, and is therefore 6 not legally sufficient evidence to deny parole.

7 8 As to "parole plans," petitioner has a home to live in and a job in 9 Honduras. (Exhibit D page 23:2-27, 24:1-7, 25:1-7). 15 CCR § 2402(d)(8) 10 states:

11 "Understanding and plans for the future. The prisoner 12 has made realistic plans for release or has developed 13 marketable skills that can be put to use upon release."
(See, Exhibit E).

14 In the instant case, petitioner has realistic plans for release, i.e., a 15 job and home to live in. Furthermore, 15 CCR § 2402(c) is strictly 16 "circumstances tending to show unsuitability," while 15 CCR § 2402(d) is 17 circumstances tending to show suitability." (See Exhibit E). Here, the Board 18 used a factor that should be used to find suitability for parole and turned 19 it around to find petitioner unsuitable. The Boards demand that petitioner 20 obtain a vocation despite being on the vocation waiting list since 2000, 21 after petitioner received his GED, is not a factor to be used as a finding 22 of unsuitability. (15 CCR § 2402(d); Exhibit E; See also Exhibit D page 23 28:7-27, 29:1-9). Furthermore, no where in the statutory (Penal Code § 24 3041) nor regulatory provisions (Cal.Code Regs. tit 15 § 2402 et seq.), 25 does it state that the Board may find petitioner "unsuitable" because he has 26 insufficiently participated in institutional programming, including 27 vocational training and self-help programming. (Exhibit D page 45:2-10, 28

1 48:19-26, 52:1-2). This is an illegal application of the law because no 2 law exists giving such authority to find petitioner unsuitable for parole.
 3 (See, Cal.Cod.Reg. tit 15 § 2402 et seq.; Exhibit E). Therefore, this 4 is not "some evidence" to deny parole for the fourth time and is an illegal 5 application of law, viz., no law exists giving such authority to find 6 petitioner "unsuitable" for parole.

7 Secondly, parole suitability does not rest on the question of if a 8 parole applicant's "institutional programming, including vocational and 9 self-help" as stated by the Board are sufficient for the Board's demands.
 10 The sole question on parole suitability is if a "prisoner currently would 11 pose an unreasonable risk of danger if released at this time." (In re Smith, 12 114 Cal.App.4th 343, 370, 372, (2003), citing Cal.Code Regs. tit 15 § 2402 13 subdivision (a)); Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 1070 [Board must show 14 that the inmate poses a "continuing danger to the public."]; Shaputis, supra, 15 37 Cal.Rptr.3d at 334-335). Nothing in the record states the Board believes or even 16 suggests that petitioner would pose a "current" threat to society regarding 17 his institutional programming, including vocational training and self-help.

18 Even "assuming there may be some connection between [petitioner's] ...
 19 limited vocational training, the Board did not established how this ...
 20 makes him unsuitable as a threat to public safety." (In re Deluna, 126 21 Cal.App.4th 585, 598, 24 Cal.Rptr.3d 643, 652 (2005)).

22 Thirdly, California Penal Code § 3041(b) contemplates that a parole 23 denial may only be based if the Board

24 "Determines that the gravity of the current convicted 25 offense or offenses, or the timing and gravity of current 26 or past convicted offenses, is such that consideration 27 of the public safety requires a more lengthy period of 28 incarceration for this individual, and that a parole date, therefore, can-not be fixed at this meeting." (See, also, McQuillion, supra, 306 F.3d at 901).

Nowhere does Penal Code § 3041 parole statute drafted by the legislature

1 state that "institutional programming , including vocational and self-help" 2 that do not measure up to the Board's demands authorize the Board to use 3 these factors as such for finding of unsuitability requiring a "more lengthy 4 period of incarceration."

5 California Code of Regulations, title 15 § 2402 et seq., itself does 6 not authorize "insufficient institutional programming, including vocational 7 training and self-help" that do not rise up to the Board's demands as a 8 basis of "unsuitability." (See, Exhibit E). But even if it did authorize 9 the Board to use those factors, it would provide no legal authority for 10 for doing so if they excuse the scope of the Board's power under statute.
11 (See, In re Stanley, 54 Cal.App.3d 1030, 1036 (1976) ["A cardinal principle 12 hold that administrative regulations must conform to the enabling law; that 13 an administrative agency has no discretion to exceed the authority conferred 14 upon it by statute."])).
15

16 California Penal Code § 3041(b) "creates a presumption that parole 17 release will be granted." (McQuillion, supra, 306 F.3d at 902), and creates 18 "an expectation that [petitioner] will be granted parole." (Rosenkrantz, 19 supra, 29 Cal.4th at 654). Nowhere in Penal Code § 3041 or the Board's 20 regulations does it even state or authorize a finding of "unsuitability" 21 when "institutional programming, vocational training, and self-help do not 22 meet up to the Board's demands. As such this does not trump petitioner's 23 "presumption that parole release will be granted" and his "expectation 24 that [he] will be granted parole" and is not "some evidence" under the 25 current state of applicable legal provisions for finding of unsuitability.

26 Furthermore, under the statutory and regulatory provision, the Board 27 must parole petitioner unless it finds he currently presents an unreasonable 28 risk of danger to society if parole. (In re Smith, 114 Cal.App.4th 343, 370, 372 (2003), citing Cal. Code Regs. tit., 15 § 2402 (a); Dannenberg, supra, 34 Cal.4th at 1070 [evidence must show petitioner poses a "continuous danger to the public safety"]; Shaputis, supra, 37 Cal.Rptr.3d at 334-335 [Board must show a "current" threat]].

There is no evidence in the record that shows petitioner "currently" poses an unreasonable risk to society 15 years after the offense occurred. The Board has pointed to no evidence showing a "nexus" between the crime and petitioner's potential for violence 15 years later to show petitioner "currently" poses an unreasonable risk to society if release. (See, In re George Scott, supra, 34 Cal.Rptr.3d at 916, 926 [Board and Governor apply a "nexus" rationale to the offense and conduct of the prisoner; Exhibit D]).

The Board held that petitioner has "not incur any disciplinaries while within the institution," and stated, "We'd also like to commend you for the multiple laudatory chronos in your file as well as for your continued participation in AA/NA," obtaining a "GED," and acknowledged petitioner's risk assessment was only "minimal." (Exhibit D page 49:6-7, 45:17-18, 52:13-26, 53:21-22; See also, Exhibit A page 12:3-8, 14:7-27, 15:1-27, 16:23-24; B page 22:4, 22:10-27, 23:1-27, 24:1-8, 33:17-20, 25:12-13; C page 21:2-4, 22:7-11, 22:16-27, 23:1-11, 23:24-25, 24:4-6, 26:1-2).

As stated above, the Board stated that the psychological report, "Indicates that if [petitioner] were to be release to the community, [petitioner's] risk would be minimal," not an "unreasonable risk of danger to the society" as mandated by 15 CCR § 2402, subd, (a) (Exhibit D page 49:5-7; Exhibit E), as such, "findings" that petitioner needs "self-help" is contrary to the records and supports petitioner's assertions that parole hearing was not supported by "some evidence" and "was a sham." (See, In

1 re Ramirez, 94 Cal.App.4th 549, 571 (2001); In re Smith, 114 Cal.App.4th 2 343, 369, (2003); In re Scott, 119 Cal.App.4th 871, 896-897 (2004) [same];
3 Irons, supra, 358 F.Supp.2d at 948 [same]]. The reliance on self-help 4 therapy is not supported by "some evidence" that contains "an indicia of 5 reliability" to deny parole denying petitioner due process of law. (See, 6 Superintendent v Hill, supra, 472 U.S. at 456; McQuillion, supra, 306 F.3d 7 at 904; Biggs, supra, 334 F.3d at 915; Scott, supra, 119 Cal.App.4th at 899).

8 9 Lastly, the "opposition to a finding of parole suitability" is not some 10 evidence to support a denial of parole as mentioned by the Board. (Exhibit 11 D page 51:1-4). While the Board may consider comments by the district 12 attorney or his representatives, (Penal Code § 3046), nowhere in the statutes 13 or regulations does it state that parole should be granted or denied based 14 on the position of the district attorney's office. The decision to grant 15 parole rests on the guidelines listed in 15 CCR § 2400 et. seq., and Penal 16 Code § 3041. (Rosenkrantz, supra, 29 Cal.4th at 658 [there must be "some 17 evidence in the record before the Board [that] supports the decision to 18 deny parole, based upon the factors specified by statute and regulation"])

19 20
21 CONCLUSION

22 Recital of the commitment offense and prior commitment offense behaviour 23 that occurred over 15 years ago, as done in petitioner's case, for fourth 24 time, is not "some evidence" that contains "an indicia of reliability" that 25 petitioner is "CURRENTLY" would pose an unreasonable risk of danger if 26 release at this time." (Scott, supra, 119 Cal.App.4th at 899; Biggs, supra, 27 334, F.3d at 915-917; Smith, supra, 114 Cal.App.4th at 370, 372; Dannenberg, 28 supra, 34 Cal.4th at 1070; Shaputis, supra, 37 Cal.Rptr.3d at 334-335).

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

- 1
- 2 1). That an evidentiary hearing be granted and/or;
- 3 2). That the Court order a parole date for release be set for petitioner
- 4 and that petitioner be release in said date (See, McQuillion v Dunca, 342
- 5 F.3d 1012, 1015-1016 (9th Cir. 2003) [return for a new parole hearing before
- 6 the executive branch would amount to an "idle act" when there is no evidence
- 7 to deny parole, citing In re Smith, 109 Cal.App.4th at 507] and/or;
- 8 3): That the Court order the Board to set a parole date in accordance
- 9 with this Court's findings;
- 10 4). Any other relief this Court may deem just and proper to promote
- 11 the ends of justice.
